

Potential Interview Questions

1. Why a one-armed detective?
 - a. I wanted someone who appears to have a handicap, but to show that he can do just about everything anyone else can do.
2. Where did the idea / inspiration come from for a one-armed detective?
 - a. Had a friend with a prosthetic leg and it didn't hold him back from much. He even plays sled-hockey to an para-olympic level.
 - b. Also, as will be explained in book two – it gives the detective an edge – an element of surprise. People underestimate him. He's a symbol for all who get underestimated on what they can achieve.
3. Story doesn't go into too much detail on dealing with one arm. Why?
 - a. I don't want people to have sympathy. I don't want him to appear "handicapped". There will be some things thrown in, probably most for comedic element than anything else.
4. What is different about the way you're marketing / selling your book.
 - a. I am giving ½ of my profits to an organization that helps victims of human trafficking.
5. Why do you have a passion for helping victims of human trafficking?
 - a. Working 11 years in a youth group. Can't imagine seeing those girls I worked with going through something like being trafficked.
 - b. Have some friends whose daughter went through this. Have seen how hard it was on them and how long it's taking her to recover.
6. What is the inspiration behind An Angel and a One-Armed Man?
 - a. Needed something for Lefty Bruder. Also, I began thinking about how someone with a lot of money could help trafficking victims, thus came up with Calvin Rockport. Finally, the house I describe is real – used to be the owner of the company I used to work for. Thought it would be a great house for this type of thing. Have since found a new structure even better. Will use that in book 2.
7. How can readers help with human trafficking?
 - a. Buy my book! 😊
 - b. Also, there are many organizations helping these victims. I can supply a list of some of them.
- 8.
